YES, WE'RE OPEN
St. Louis Largely Unaffected by Rising River

ST. LOUIS -- June 20, 2008 -- Concerns about high water have not had a major impact on travel to and from St. Louis-area destinations and attractions. It's "business as usual" for the Gateway City, and no additional impact is expected when the Mississippi River crests early next week. This year's flooding in St. Louis is not anywhere near the levels that rose in the flood of 1993, with river levels 10-feet below those in '93. In addition, St. Louis is protected with concrete flood walls instead of earthen levees, and the floodgates have been closed.

As cities and towns to the north struggle with the rising floodwaters from the Mississippi River, St. Louis is fortunate to have only minor adjustments to deal with at this time. Parking along the cobblestone levee on the riverfront is not available, but the Arch Parking Garage at 200 North Washington Avenue remains open and available for parking. The Gateway Arch has not been affected and is open on its regular schedule.

Fair Saint Louis and the Live on the Levee free concert series will be relocated due to the inaccessibility of the riverfront. Officials announced the annual events, which feature free concerts, fireworks and other activities, will take place at Soldiers Memorial, a park-like area located across from St. Louis' City Hall. St. Louis is home to a number of new events and attractions in 2008, including "Niki," the unique artwork of French artist Niki de Saint Phalle. Forty colorful, larger-than-life sculptures are on display at the Missouri Botanical Garden through October. "Evel Knievel" has arrived at Six Flags St. Louis, and the new roller coaster is a daredevil's dream. The thrill ride features a 55-foot double-down drop, 16 hills with camelbacks, high-banked turns at up to 67-degree angles. And, there's a group of special guests in town at the Saint Louis Zoo this summer, as "Dinoroarus" comes to life. The walk-through exhibit features 16 life-size animatronic dinosaurs that move, roar and spit – and no, we're not making that up.
